

The Ehlers-Danlos Society™

Thanks for your interest in Loose Connections.

Articles in Loose Connections tend to run between 800 and 1200 words. These aren't firm limits; original material isn't always neatly defined. We welcome stories about EDS, how you manage symptoms, relevant fiction or poetry, artwork, reviews, medical and research papers – indeed, anything that relates to the life of someone with EDS. We give preference to original work that hasn't been published elsewhere. Deadlines are mostly unimportant; a periodical always has another issue coming up.

For articles: Attach your text document in either Word (.doc) or Rich Text Format (.rtf) to an email sent to stories@ehlers-danlos.com, mark.martino@ehlers-danlos.com, or EDSerMark@gmail.com that also tells us how to reach you for more information if needed. High-quality PDF format without security is also acceptable.

For photographs or art works in image form, please use TIF or PNG format of at least 150dpi; for vector art, please use AI or EPS format. High-quality PDF format without security is also welcome. Attach the files to an email sent to stories@ehlers-danlos.com, mark.martino@ehlers-danlos.com, or EDSerMark@gmail.com. For photographs, please also identify the event or cause, including any relevant identification (persons involved, date, photographer's name if needed) and how to reach you for more information.

Text articles, photographs, or any other submissions to Loose Connections are accepted only on condition that publication of that material is not under restrictions on its publication. The Ehlers-Danlos Society reserves all and final editorial privileges, including the right to choose not to print a submitted story; submissions may be edited at the discretion of the editorial staff.

I look forward to your submission.
