The Ehlers-Danlos Society partnering with Project ECHO®

Enhancing care for people with all types of Ehlers-Danlos syndrome (EDS) and hypermobility spectrum disorder (HSD) through case-based discussions, sharing knowledge and expert updates.

This is a program for healthcare professionals across all disciplines who want to improve their ability to care for people with EDS, HSD and associated symptoms and conditions.

Project ECHO addresses population health in a scalable way - moving knowledge instead of patients via telementoring and collaborative care.

The heart of the ECHO model™ is its hub-and-spoke knowledge-sharing networks, led by expert specialist teams. The ECHO model is not "telemedicine" where specialists assume the care of the patient; it is a guided model aimed at practice improvement, in which providers retain responsibility for patients, and gain increasing independence as skills, confidence, and self-efficacy grow.

EDS ECHO® An Evolution in Medical Education and Care Delivery

We are starting with two hubs, one in Baltimore, MD, USA, and the other at The Royal Society of Medicine, London, UK.

Over time, our aim is to open hubs all over the world.

Clinical experts will run a rolling program that covers the main aspects of EDS and HSD.

Participants will be able to share their cases and questions in the sessions and will be guided to further educational materials and support.

CME/CPD credits will be available at no charge to participants.

After taking part in the program participants are invited to join us at any future EDS ECHO sessions.

✓ We support collaborative research and education initiatives, awareness campaigns, advocacy, community-building, and care for the EDS and HSD population.

✓ One of our greatest assets is our International Consortium, a group of independent expert clinicians, scientists, and patients from across many specialties. Our medical professional members run the EDS ECHO program.

✓ We will also help interested participants to start a regional clinical group for the care of their patients, expanding the EDS ECHO network, and bringing care closer to home.
